Briefly describe your experience as an artist or involvement in public art projects:

I started experimenting with art in the 1990s and earned my B.A. in Fine Arts in 1998. I work in many different mediums, and over the years I've shown work nationally and internationally in a range of galleries and museums. In 2022, I completed my first public art project with the City of Perris, and since then I've created three more public pieces. I enjoy making public art that can be shared and experienced by the city and its community.

Describe the goal/objective of your project:

I love creating landscapes that feel layered and full of life. In this painting, I recreated the valley as seen from a high point in the Box Springs Mountain Reserve, with the surrounding hills and mountains stretching across the foreground and background. The valley opens clearly in the center, and I aimed to capture what this place may have looked like long ago.

Has the City of Moreno Valley provided funding to you in the past?
